THE PERSON CHILLS The spidemies of the Middle Ages were numérous that even such indefatigable historians as Hocker and Hauser have been compelled to leave many of them unnoticed. One of the most. interesting of these, both from the historic and medical standpoints, is the plague which fell. upon the German army in Italy, A.D. 1167, and which has been fully described by saveral contemporary chroniclers. The following outline. is based mainly ou the account given by Henry, Archdescon of Salaburg, who says that he has carefully compiled it from the narratives of eyewitnesses. The long controversy between the Empir and the Papacy had culminated in an open schism and the establishment of an Anti-pope, to support whom Frederic Barbaroska invaded Italy with a great army, directed at once against the independence of the Church and of the Lombard cities. The terrible destruction of this army in the moment of its triumph cent a thrill of the proposed works for improving the defender of mingled horror and exultation throughout Europe. "Then happened a thing

When one comes to remember the high traditions gold been hearded, there would have been ample plinging to Yorkshire and her sons in the past it seems just a trifle disturbing that there should be this friction between the leaders of opinion in the county and the recognised authorities of more than one of our national sports. Certainly. I have not followed the little misunderstandings which have arisen in the amalear swimming world very closely, and am not prepared at the moment to take sides, but apart altogether from the local or personal aspect of the differences this state of things continues, and these warchests are being added to, there one be little there are a large number of Yorkshire's friends who do not altogether approinte these simmerteranges are considered inimical to public pasce. No. I to stand up, threshed him to his heart's and eventually gained a fine victory by three content, and then turning round to drover No. 2 goals to none. There is a good deal that migh served him precisely the same. Years after this be said about the encounters of these teams and even, when the three-score-and-ton allotted to their different styles, and maybap I may tak man was passed and over. Sir Tatton showed his occasion to give a paragraph concerning them fordness op another occasion for a little bit of ere the struggle for suppremacy is commenced.
